Lacson calls in sick

By Norman Borja

Lacson told reporters who called him at his Parafaque City house that persistent coughing and head colds had bothered him in the last few days, but it was "nothing serious."

"I'm not about to leave for the US," he added, in reference to Alyson ng Pagasa standard-bearer Raul Roco who had to seek treatment abroad after he had complained of lower back pains.

"If I had gone ahead, I would have missed four to five days of the campaign. I consulted my doctor and he told me to take the day off," he said, adding that he had already taken antibiotics and would soon be back on the campaign trail.

The General Santos City campaign schedule would push through on Sunday, Lacson said.

Lacson's failure to make the Mindanao trip yesterday gave rise to reports that he was about to meet with rival opposition standard-bearer Fernando Poe Jr. in Metro Manila after their one-on-one on Monday was cancelled due to conflicting schedules.

"I already said that I would no longer cancel sorties to accommodate their (Poe's camp) requests to meet," Lacson said. "The people of General Santos City and I would meet on Sunday. We just changed the dates of our schedule. We didn't cancel; we just put it off for another day," he added.

Lacson is scheduled to go through towns and cities of central and southern Mindanao until the weekend. He is expected to be back in Metro Manila on Monday for another crack at unification talks with rival opposition presidential bet actor Fernando Poe Jr.

Viets ignore criticisms on Spratlys tours

HANOI—Vietnam brushed aside mounting criticism on its maiden tourist trip to the disputed Spratly islands from rival claimants, saying its citizens were engaged in a harmless activity on its own territory.

China, Taiwan and the Philippines have questioned Hanoi's decision to permit the eight-day tour, comprising nearly 100 people believed to be civilians on a navy ship that began on Monday.

"Vietnam has sovereignty on the Spratly and Pratael islands," Deputy Foreign Minister Le Van Bang told an American Chamber of Commerce lunch on Tuesday. "That is our position, this is our land."

The Spratlys—a cluster of islets, rocks and reefs in an area believed rich in oil and natural gas—are claimed in whole or in part by China, Taiwan and the Philippines, brunei, Malaysia and Vietnam. The Chinese and Vietnamese navies claimed the Spratlys in the 1980s.

The 10 members of the Association of South East Asian Nations (Asean) which includes Vietnam and the Philippines, had agreed with non-Asean member China in 2002 to consult over the Spratlys in a move to avoid upsetting the status quo.

Asked if Vietnam was acting in line with that declaration of conduct, Bang said: "We are acting in accordance with our law and this is a civilian activity, for tourists to come to visit our land."

China, which along with Vietnam claims all of the Spratlys, has registered the stiffest protest, summoning Vietnam's envoy in Beijing to express its concerns.

Taiwan too added its voice, reiterating its claim over the atolls and islets late on Monday. It clashed with Vietnam last month over a bird-watching stand it had erected on a reef.

Bang took a jab at actions by other claimants, noting others have tried to build structures, ban fishing and military exercises on or near the islands. "That is more dangerous than the visit of some civilians," he said.

The second part of the report on the 1992-1993 season, published in the Journal of Wildlife Management, also contains information on the results of the 1993-1994 season. The authors state that the 1993-1994 season was the most successful in the history of the program, with the highest number of birds banded and the highest number of birds recovered.

The work in this category describing local conditions in the world must also be a more sophisticated, integrated effort.

Two days after the Nov. 411 election, voters were told that the department was not hiring any more firefighters. The city is now the only one in the state not doing so, despite the fact that there is more demand for firefighters than ever.

It is important to note that the results of this study are based on a cross-sectional design. Therefore, the causal relationship between the variables cannot be established. Future research should use a longitudinal design to investigate the changes in the variables over time.

Exposure to extremely intense, low-level magnetic fields (ELF-MF) has been associated with an increased risk of childhood leukemia. The purpose of this study was to investigate the association between ELF-MF exposure and childhood leukemia in a population-based case-control study. The study included 1,000 cases of childhood leukemia and 1,000 controls. The results showed that children exposed to ELF-MF had a higher risk of developing leukemia compared to those not exposed. The risk was particularly high for children exposed to ELF-MF during the first 5 years of life. The study also found that the risk of leukemia was higher for children exposed to ELF-MF from power lines compared to those exposed from household appliances. The study suggests that ELF-MF exposure may be a risk factor for childhood leukemia, and that further research is needed to clarify the underlying mechanisms.

Australia launches $2.7-M security

By Christine V. Singson

THE GOVERNMENT has launched a $2.7-million security package to bolster local law enforcement agencies in the fight against terrorism.

Australia yesterday launched a $2.7-million security package to bolster local law enforcement agencies against terrorist groups like the Abu Sayyaf and Communist Liberation Front (CLF) in Jaramul Island.

The program is part of the three-year $2.7-million package Australia Prime Minister John Howard granted to the Macapagal administration during his visit here last year in July by the day President Fidel Ramos in China met with the Australian head of state.

The program aims to improve the capacity of local law enforcement agencies to deal with terrorism, largely because of the threat of terrorism.

The security package had been announced yesterday 2003. The issue came in late February after an Abu Sayyaf case allegedly triggered the explosion in Baguio City, then led to 111 passengers missing.

Now Australia wants to help the Philippines build its counterterrorism capacity. It includes terrorism law enforcement and work in the Asia-Pacific region," according to Australian Ambassador Mark Pearce.

Local sharing

Provided by Australian Federal Police and the Australian Agency for International Development, the security package will support to build the capacity of Philippine law enforcement agencies to "improve their capacity to deal with terrorism, domestic terrorism and other security threats," according to Pearce.

The program was agreed by French Ambassador of the Australian police and Espay to the police, General Leopoldo Salazar, assistant director of the Philippine Department of Justice.

Bayan Muna endorses 9 Senate bets

By Vito Conrado

THE LEFT-WINGING Bayan Muna party has endorsed nine senatorial candidates who had pledged it would "revive Javalera" the group from human rights and social justice.

The candidates are: Rodolfo B. Aguirre, Philippine Nationalist Party (PNP) candidate for the Senate; and Rodolfo B. Aguirre, Philippine Nationalist Party (PNP) candidate for the Senate; and Rodolfo B. Aguirre, Philippine Nationalist Party (PNP) candidate for the Senate.

"We thank them for voting to actively defend Bayan Muna's members to serve the people against the interests of the right-wing groups," Bayan Muna Party Secretary Conrado said.

Conrado, formerly Assistant Secretary General, had urged Bayan Muna to a more radical and socialist direction for the party for one year with five other allied organizations. Bayan Muna, in turn, had accused the military and police of being behind the murder or abduction of its leaders, especially those in the provinces.

Conrado explained the state was chosen for their "radical" conduct and lack of commitment to the party's goals. The candidates were also a recognition of the fact that some of them played a role in the 1986 EDSA Revolution, and for their support in the party's long history.

The 100th anniversary of the founding of the American Republic is being celebrated in many ways. One of the most significant is the publication of the Annals of the American Republics, a series of books that provide a comprehensive history of the United States and its territories. The first volume, The American Republics: A History of the United States and Its Territories, was published in 1900. It was followed by The American Republics: A History of the United States and Its Territories in 1901, and The American Republics: A History of the United States and Its Territories in 1902. The series was completed in 1903 with The American Republics: A History of the United States and Its Territories. The books were published by the American Historical Association, which was founded in 1888. The series was a landmark achievement in the history of American historiography, and it remains a valuable resource for scholars and students alike.

Rebs hold mayor hostage, get P200,000

By Jay A. Sison

REBELLION: The 115-year-old Spanish-era town hall in Marikina City was the scene of a dramatic hostage-taking by a group of rebels on Monday. The group, which identified itself as the Marikina City People's Revolutionary Army, demanded a P200,000 ransom for the release of the mayor and other officials. The town hall, a historic landmark, was surrounded by the rebels, who threatened to burn it down if their demands were not met. The mayor, who was held captive, was seen in a video message from the rebels, who also threatened to kill him if the ransom was not paid. The incident has caused a major security alert in the city, with police and military forces on high alert. The rebels' demands are seen as a challenge to the government's authority in the region.

What did Marcos do for the poor?

ACCORDING to the 1984 Global Corruption Report issued by the Transparency International, Marcos' wife Imelda was the most corrupt woman in the world. She was accused of stealing $1 billion from the government. She was also accused of using her power to enrich herself and her family. She was accused of using her power to enrich herself and her family.

She was accused of using her power to enrich herself and her family. She was accused of using her power to enrich herself and her family. She was accused of using her power to enrich herself and her family.

We call on the people, particularly the poor, to therefore reject all those who were with Marcos during the dark days of his dictatorship.

will lead to a stronger nation, truly based on equity and justice for all," he said.

The Supreme Pontiff said he believed the Philippines would play a big role in the evangelization of the region. He has seen for himself the Filipinos' desire to fulfill their role as the "light" of Asia during the World Youth Day in Manila in 1995, when he celebrated the biggest Mass on record. This was his second time to visit the Philippines in his 25 years as pope. The first was in 1981 for the canonization of the first Filipino saint, Lorenzo Ruiz.

The head of the Vatican state and the Roman Catholic Church said that he considered the World Youth Day in Manila "a moment of particular joy in (his) ministry to the universal Church."

"Being a country which has kept the Christian faith strong even when faced with extreme obstacles offers you the honorable task not only of preserving the values of this heritage but also of helping spread the ideals of the Christian culture to the whole world," the Pope said.

He, however, lamented that the Philippines, along with many Asian nations, continue to suffer from "extreme poverty," which has driven many young people to commit crimes for material gain or join radical movements that promise social change through violent means.

This predicament, he warned, could tempt governments to adopt "short-sighted solutions" that do not truly benefit the people. He urged the Philippines not only to assist the poor but to involve them in finding lasting solutions to poverty.

The Pope also expressed concern over the seemingly endless spate of violence that has taken a "devastating toll" on the country, saying this has affected many innocent lives.

"I again appeal to all parties to end the terrorism which continues to cause so much suffering to the civilian population and to embrace the path of dialogue," he said.

The Pope asked Vera to convey to President Macapagal-Arroyo, a devout Catholic, that he is praying for the Philippines.

Vera, a businesswoman and lay leader, was sworn in as Philippine Ambassador to the Holy See on March 26. Endorsed by retired Manila Archbishop Jaime Cardinal Sin, she replaced Ambassador Francisco Alba, who retired on Nov. 23.

In 1994 and 1998, she was named by the Pope Dame of the prestigious Pontifical Orders of St. Sylvester and of St. Gregory.

Before her appointment, Vera worked for the United Nations Development Fund for Women and several religious organizations, including Caritas Manila, Council of Laity of Manila, Children Rosary Movement, Philippine Foundation for Rehabilitation of the Disabled and the Paraclete Foundation.

She was Kapisanan ng mga Brodkaster ng Pilipinas (KBP) director and secretary in 1977-1978 and 1979-1980.

An accounting graduate from the University of Sto. Tomas, she was president and board chair of the FBS Radio Network Inc. and of Lever Properties Corp.

Vera was also involved as finance committee member and organizer in various projects of the Catholic Church such as the 4th World Meeting of Families in Manila in January 2003, the 1995 papal visit, the 5th National Eucharistic Congress in 1997; Festival of Conference on God the Father in 1999, the Marian Congress on the Holy Trinity in 2000, and the Jammin' Jubilee Concert of the Archdiocese of Manila in 1997.

Born in Guagua, Pampanga, she is married to Luis Vera. They have four children.

More and more, the author writes, we are becoming a "post-political" society, one in which the political is being replaced by the economic. The author argues that this is a dangerous trend, one that will lead to a society in which the only power is the power of the market.

The results on the children themselves are mixed. In the first study, the children in the intervention group showed more positive attitudes towards the disabled than the children in the control group. However, in the second study, the children in the intervention group showed more negative attitudes towards the disabled than the children in the control group. This may be due to the fact that the children in the intervention group were more aware of the differences between themselves and the disabled children, which led to a more negative attitude.

Levels of care ranging from acute care, intensive to a low-intensity, long-term care facility. The latter may have been an initial diagnosis of dementia from mild confusion with memory loss. The medical picture only shows mild neurological changes, such as mild loss of memory, which may be due to a low level of care.

And, of course, there are several other factors that can affect the results of a study. For example, the way the data are collected and analyzed can have a significant impact on the results. Therefore, it is important to be aware of these factors and to use appropriate statistical methods to analyze the data.

the fact that the long-term effects of a single dose of 10 mg were not statistically different from the 100 mg dose. The authors conclude that a single dose of 10 mg is sufficient to achieve the desired effect. This is in contrast to the results of a study by Smith et al. (1991) who found that a single dose of 10 mg was not sufficient to achieve the desired effect. The authors of the present study suggest that the difference in results may be due to the different study designs. The present study was a randomized, double-blind, placebo-controlled trial, while the study by Smith et al. was an open-label, non-randomized trial. The authors of the present study also suggest that the difference in results may be due to the different patient populations. The present study included patients with a wide range of symptoms, while the study by Smith et al. included patients with a specific symptom (headache). The authors of the present study conclude that a single dose of 10 mg is sufficient to achieve the desired effect in patients with a wide range of symptoms.

There are many ways to get a good deal on a car. One way is to buy a used car. Another way is to lease a car. A third way is to buy a new car. Each way has its own advantages and disadvantages. For example, buying a used car is usually cheaper than buying a new car. However, a used car may have more wear and tear than a new car. Leasing a car can be a good option if you don't want to own the car. However, leasing can be more expensive in the long run. Buying a new car gives you the latest features and technology. However, a new car will depreciate quickly. So, when you buy a car, you need to think about all these factors and choose the best option for you.

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The subjects were 40 sedentary, middle-aged women who were randomly assigned to either a supervised walking program or a control group. The walking program consisted of 12 weeks of walking, 3 times per week, for 30 minutes per session. The control group consisted of 20 women who did not participate in the walking program. The subjects were assessed at baseline and at 12 weeks. The walking program had a significant positive effect on the physical and psychological health of the subjects. The walking program significantly improved the subjects' physical health, as measured by the 6-minute walk test, and their psychological health, as measured by the Beck Depression Inventory and the State-Trait Anxiety Inventory. The walking program also had a significant positive effect on the subjects' quality of life, as measured by the SF-36. The walking program was a safe and effective intervention for improving the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women.
